Desperate Battle Between Vimy and Neuville Reported by Berlin War Office.

COUNTER ATTACKS FAIL

French Unable to Retake Positions Lost During Last Few Days.

BERLIN, Jan. 27. (by wireless to Sayville).—The following report was given out to-day by the German War

"The enemy's artillery shelled German positions on the sand dupes along the seacoast. At the same time monitors shelled the Westende (Belgium) District. Both attacks were without effect.

"After exploding mines, the Germans made an attack on both sides of the road between Vimy and Neuville and stormed French positions between 500 and 600 yards long. They captured one officer, fifty-two men cne machine gun and three minethrowers. Counter attacks made by the enemy against these positions and other trenches taken by the Germans during the last few days resulted in spirited fights with hand grenades. but were without success for the enemy. The city of Lens was shelled heavily by the enemy."

American women are masculine.

Giuseppe Sergardi says so.

He ought to know because he is a European-an Italian, in fact-and therefore eminently qualified to testify as an expert concerning the women of the western world.

Signor Sergardi contributes his highly interesting comparison between the Latin and American women to the current number of Vanity Fair.

"The women who emigrated from Europe to America were freed from paternal authority," he says. "They were man's equal. After ten generations-in which all the virile forces of the men were needed in their struggle against nature—the American woman, refined and cultivated, took the upper hand.
